Austin • 3 active listings with pool under $400K

All three are freshly listed within the past week, and the price spread is narrow ($375K–$399K), suggesting this is a fairly tight and active pocket of inventory.

Beverly Hills • 5 active listings with pool options across luxury price points.

Prices span $3.195M to $68M, inventory is mostly fresh at 8 DOM or under, but none of these listings come close to your $400K–$500K budget.

2557 Hutton Drive:

Best square footage per dollar in this set at 3,918 sqft for $3.995M, and the pool checks one of your must-haves. Built 1962, so expect a renovation conversation.

77 Beverly Park Lane:

Sits inside one of the most secured gated communities in the country, which directly matches your gated and private criteria. At $68M it is in a completely different universe budget-wise, but it is the only listing here that hits multiple must-haves simultaneously.

- First we gave a query for under $400K homes in Austin with 4 bedrooms and pool. Then we changed the query to luxury homes in Beverly Hills. The system started changing requirements on its own bedrooms and budget got increased without asking, instead of sticking to what the user actually requested.

2. After restarting the server and starting a fresh chat (without even logging in), when I ask for homes in New York it still applies old constraints like 4 beds, 7 baths, pool, etc. These were never given in this session, so the system is not resetting properly and is incorrectly returning no results.

3. The system shows adaptive behavior by first asking for details and then providing listings after gaining more context, which is good. However, the same query initially returns no results and later shows listings without any explanation. This makes the behavior feel inconsistent rather than intentionally guided.

Miami • 2 active listings

Both units are priced within your budget, but neither clears your bathroom minimum or delivers the luxury scale your profile calls for.

15685 SW 82nd Cir Ln 28: Listed just 1 day ago, so you have a timing edge if anything here appeals. That said, the 1981 build and compact footprint are a significant step away from the luxury finishes you prioritize.

8964 W Flagler St 109: The pool is a plus, but 69 days on market in Miami suggests either a pricing issue or condition concerns worth investigating before engaging.

The shared gap here is meaningful: both listings are condos under 1,300 sqft with 2 bathrooms, falling well short of Snaphomz AI can make mistakes. Consider checking important information.

4. For the New York query, the system returned a rental listing ($6,150/month) even though the user asked for homes under $500K (implying purchase). It did not clearly separate rent vs sale in results, which can confuse users. The system should strictly filter or clearly label listings as sale vs rent based on the query.

5. For the New York query, the system not only showed a rental listing for a purchase request, but also displayed a Miami property image/card when answering about the New York home. This indicates a mismatch between listing data and UI rendering, causing incorrect visual context.

You're right, and the profile has been noted. Your budget cap is $400,000.

That said, neither of these results is a strong match. Both fall short on bedrooms, neither is new construction, and the Santa Rosa listing has no pool.

Palm Desert • 2 active listings, both under budget.

Thin inventory here, and neither listing clears your 4-bedroom minimum or new construction requirement.

74229 Catalina Way: Has the pool you need, but built 1978 means renovation costs could surface quickly. At $385,000 it sits near your ceiling with older bones.

468 Colonial Park Drive: 96 days on market suggests either a pricing issue or condition concerns worth investigating. Under budget, but missing pool and two bedrooms short.

The shared gap across both listings is the bedroom count. Every result here is 2 to 3 bedrooms, which is your most 74229 Catalina Way is the stronger of the two. It has a pool, more bedrooms, a private enclosed yard, and mountain views. $175,000 is the price gap between them, and Colonial Park Drive's 96 days on market is a red flag worth probing before considering it even at the lower price point.

Neither listing meets your 4-bedroom minimum or new construction requirement.

74229 Catalina Way is the better choice between the two.

It has a pool, an enclosed private yard, mountain views, an attached garage, and fresh updates including new paint, flooring, and appliances making it move-in ready. $385,000 keeps you at your budget ceiling but delivers meaningfully more value than Colonial Park Drive at 96 days on market with no pool and fewer bedrooms.

The only gaps against your profile are the bedroom count at 3 instead of 4, and the 1978 build year falling short of your new construction preference.

Price alone does not make it the better buy. Here is why 74229 Catalina Way still wins against your profile.

468 Colonial Park Drive is a 55+ senior community, meaning you may not qualify to purchase it at all depending on your age. It has no pool, only 2 bedrooms against your 4-bedroom minimum, built 1977, and 96 days on market signals something is keeping buyers away. The space rent of $765 per month is also an ongoing cost that adds up over time.

$175,000 in savings sounds compelling but not when the property misses four of your core requirements and restricts who can live there.

74229 Catalina Way is the better fit, full stop.

6. The system correctly identifies that the second property is in a 55+ restricted community and that the user (age 32) is not eligible, but still continues to show and include that property in results afterward. This creates a contradiction between guidance and displayed listings, leading to confusing and misleading recommendations.

which state is best to buy

Based purely on your profile, here is the breakdown:

Austin, TX: Strong job market, no state income tax, and your $800,000 budget goes significantly further than coastal markets. New construction is abundant, which hits your must-have directly.

Miami, FL: No state income tax, warm climate, and pool properties are common and competitively priced within your budget. Inventory for 4-bedroom homes with pools is solid.

California: Your most searched market so far, but $800,000 in secondary markets like Lancaster or Antioch rather than core metros like LA or San Francisco.

Chicago, IL: Your budget is strong here and gets you into safe, established neighborhoods with larger square footage, but pool properties are less common given the climate.

Austin is the strongest fit overall given new construction availability, budget stretch, no age-restricted communities, and pool-friendly builds in safe suburbs like Round Rock, Cedar Park, and Pflugerville.

5813 W Avenue L11, Lancaster, CA: Listed at 0 DOM, so this is essentially first-look inventory with a pool and five bedrooms well within your budget. Lancaster sits further from major metro cores, so weigh the commute trade-off carefully.

2532 Cottage Pointe Drive, Riverbank, CA: The most affordable of the set at $495,000, which leaves meaningful room in your budget, though it has no pool and is the smallest footprint here.

150 Deerglen Circle, Vacaville, CA: At $720,000 this pushes just over your $800K ceiling after typical closing costs, but it delivers the largest square footage and a pool. Vacaville sits between Sacramento and the Bay Area, which works

7. When the user asked for Austin listings ("yeah show"), the system returned properties from California instead of Austin. This indicates a major location-mapping issue where the system ignores the requested location and continues showing previous results. It fails to switch context correctly and serves irrelevant data.
